Reflexions

UPON THE

IDOLATRY

OFTHE

JESUITS,

AND

Other Affairs relating to Religion

IN CHINA.

Written Originally in Italian; Translated into French; now made English from the Paris Copy, by a Gentleman at the Hague, and sent in a Letter to

The Reverend Dr. Francis Atterbury.

LONDON:

Printed by H. Hills, and Sold by the Bookselle r of London and Westminster, 1709.

HARVARD COLLEGE LUB-PLY ICAY 26, 1913 SUBSCRIPTION FUR ENGLISH HIS IMMERICAL IBACIS : Mairs relating to Poligion rich Oh mady in L. lar: Triplated into र त्यार १ मा अस्ति है जा में भी है जा में मार अस्ति है जा है Copy, by a Contiend at the Act of 10711 The turned big The Reverend Distriance Ass bury. LONDON fined by E Fills, and Sold by the Posteri of Lowley and is finished. 19

t Li B

TO THE

Reverend Dr. Francis Atterbury.

Reverend Sir.

HE following little Piece baving been just Printed at Paris, under the following Title, Réflexions sur les Affaires presentes de la Chine. Ecrit traduit de l'Italien, and communicated to me as a very great Rarity, (by reason it is not sold, but handed about privately) I apply'd my self to a careful Perusal, and immediately found in it much Sophistry, but more Design; (having often, Sir, heard You express a more than ordinary Desire, of being throughly acquainted with the French Writers, towards which you have already made a curious Collection of their most Eminent Ecclesiasticks;) and being oblig'd to return it to the Gentleman who lent it me, I have, Sir, (in acknowledgment of the many Favours receiv'd from You) attempted a Translation of it; which since the French Copy is not to be had, will, I hope, meet with as favourable a Reception, as is meant in the Offer.

In Reading it over I could not forbear remarking, and had once fome thoughts of hinting my Observations to You; but considering, Sir, that the Design of the most cunning Parts of it will appear at first View upon your perusal of it, I submit the whole to your Judgment.

The French Publisher would have it thought only a Translation from the Italian, which I take to be a Feint, that the Author might be the less suspected; I make no doubt, Sir, but you have seen what Pieces have been already made publick, relating to the Affairs of the Missioners in China upon which these Reslexions are made. The Author's seeming Design is only some pacificatory Advice, for the healing those Breaches occasion'd by the over-zealous Heat in those Parts, by which they have in some measure, as he thinks, retarded the Progress of Propagating the Christian Religion.

But to detain you, Sir, no longer from the Tract it felf, I remain Yours on all Occasions to Command, is is is is in the second of t

Advertisement

Of the French Translator.

W Hat I bere offer is only the Translation of an Italian Original, which has already feen feveral Impressions. 'Tu confidently affirm'd to come from the Hand of a Secular Gentleman; but whoever the Author may be, the Translator is an ABBE. His only aim in this small Performance is to gratify the Curiosity, or rather Impatience, of the Publick; for no Body imagines that the Jesuits will permit the new VVritings of their Adversaries to pass unanswer'd. Whereas these Fathers have upon all Occasions Discours'd upon this present Subject with much Caution and Moderation, be thought it became bim to imitate their Example; by softening certain Passages in these Reflexions, where they feem'd a little too fevere. He has also omitted unnecessary Repetitions, or what he found less material to the Cause in band. In all other Respects the Translation is very Faithful, and be only speaks the true Sense of the Autbor. is be feedeng et.

to have in five meating, or to runks, very deaths Property of the

But to elected you, Sir, no long of our the Tr

the are exalinithed in the second by terms

Y on all Occaling to Company

e

fo

fh

H

tif

pir

los nee

and

£

Reflexions upon the Idolatry of the Jesuits in China.

REFLEXION I.

State of the Affairs of China; the first Motion that arises in the Heart of every good Christian is, to wish that the Intention wherewith the Chinese practice their Ceremonies, may have nothing reprehensible in it, so as perfectly to agree with the Profession of our Faith. The very fear that these Ceremonies shou'd be superstitious, and that by condemning them Religion shou'd be expos'd to an evident Danger of being destroy'd in China, this Apprehension alone, I say, ought to be a sensible Affliction to whoever makes Profession of the Law of Fesus Christ.

The Zeal and Charity which we all owe to our Brethren, ought to extend it self no less to this far distant Christianity, than to Italy, Spain, or any other Neighbouring Country, were the like Danger impending over it. That Person therefore who shou'd be fearful less the Ceremonies inform'd against, shou'd after all prove blameless, who shou'd discover in his Heart a secret Satisfaction to see the Desenders of them mortify'd, and shou'd be glad of the Occasion that this vast Empire shou'd remain under the Power of the Devil, with the loss of so many Souls; he that shou'd speak of all this with Joy, such a One having these Sentiments and Practices, must needs have little of the Christian in him, and whom Hatred and Jealousy must have depriv'd of all Sense of Charity.

REFLECTION II.

TN like manner, when it is known to the true Sons of the L Church, that the Emperor has declar'd the Ceremonies in question to be purely civil; that the Learned and Doctors of the Empire judge the same; that this Sentiment is confirm'd by their Classic Authors, that the Christians have depos'd it upon Oath, and fent Attestations thereof to Rome; that almost all the Bishops and Missioners are of the same Opinion: The true Sons of the Church perceive within themselves a certain Joy, which makes them lift up their Hands to bless the Almighty. If so, it follows that they who shou'd be disfatisfy'd, who at the bottom of their Hearts shou'd with that the Emperour was found in a Lye, the Christians perjurd, and the Missioners no better than Cheats: Those who shou'd have fuch Sentiments, and shew as much by their Discourses and Actions, by spreading defamatory Libels, or what is yet worse, by declaiming from the Pulpit upon this Subject; Men of this Character wou'd certainly be unworthy to be cherish'd in the Bosom of the Church, that good Mother which so tenderly loves all her Children, and particularly the new converced Christians.

21

th

Ce

w oti

40 the

kno

fai

who

who ana

ligi

Nes

Dir

Afi

Eng

Seen

more

your bis p tho

REFLECTION III.

This being supposed, his Holiness the Pope, who as Vicar of Jesus Christ is to give an exact Account of the Souls committed to his Charge, and of the Depositum of Faith: This Sovereign Bishop, when he sent his Apostolical Legat into China, to receive by him more certain Informations of the State of Religion in that Empire: Undoubtedly did not say to him, Go, and omie nothing that may make the Chinese Ceremonies appear Idolaerous; forbid the Missioners to consult the Emperour upon those Matters, because the Light which they might receive from him, might ascertain the lawfulness of the contrary Opinion. If the new Christisans shou'd present you any Memorials upon this Affair, fail not to tear them in their Presence, and trample them under Foot; and if any Tumult shou'd arise from thence, east the Fault upon the Jesuits. A. bove all forget not to treat those Fathers rudely, and particularly in the Presence of the Mandarins : Declare them Usurers, Perjur'd, and Lyars; bring them, if possible, to the Bar. Let all the Court perceive shas that you look upon them as vile Souls, unworthy of the Emperor's Efteem. Make known to all China, that the Faith which they have Preach'd, is different from the Christian Religion. Whoever shou'd suspect the Pope, who is so Equitable and Just, to have given such Orders, or to be capable of forming so detestable a Design, wou'd be guilty of Sacrilege and an enormous Crime, from which nothing but Drunkenness or Madness cou'd execuse him.

REFLEXION IV.

THE Instructions which his Holiness gave to his Legat, must certainly have been the Orders of a Father, althor refolute and efficacious, yet full of Goodness, paternal Love, and Christian Charity.

I imagine to my felf, nor is it an empty and vain Thought, that he deliver'd himself to this Effect. We are between two dangerous Rocks. On the one side, is represented to us that the Chinese Ceremonies are Idolatrous: I tremble, and am feiz'd with Horror, when I think that perhaps I shall be oblig'd to condemn them. On the other side, the Emperor himself, and the greatest part of the Missioners assure me, that these Ceremonies are purely civil and irreprehensible. If therefore it should happen, that I pass Condemnation upon them, it would blast this hopeful Vineyard, and the loss of a Multitude of Souls would be imputed to me. The Language of China is altogether unknown to us: For which reason, we cannot pronounce (as in the Affair of Jansenius) upon the precise Sense of the Chinese Books, of which the two contending Parties give different Explanations, fince the Entrance into China of some Missioners of another Stamp than those who were there before, we hear of nothing but Disputes, Libels, and Accusations. This gives some Grounds to fear, lest our boly Religion shou'd be banish'd from that Empire, as at has been from some Neighbouring Kingdoms, under Colour of its being the Source of Divisions and Troubles, and so be suppress'd for ever throughout all Afia.

Go then as an Angel of Peace! as an Angel of Counsel! To put an End to these Debates, perhaps the greatest that have hitherto been seen in the Church of God. Be sure not to shew your self by as a more to one Party than another. Take care that no one adhere to your Opinion thro Flattery, and make your Friendship subservient to bis private Ends.

I wou'd not have you give your self up blindly to the Jesuits, even the you shou'd find some Dominican for them, as at other times several have been found, even of Bishops who have writ, and declar'd themselves for their Opinion; but I also admonish you on the other band, not to abandon your self to the Direction of their Adversaries, and their principal Accuser.

Se

77

C

V

S

$1

2 po

th

n

ti

0

I

h

th

th

aı

m

W

ti

a

th

C

Mistrust those whom you shall see transported with too much heat in the present dispute. Listen peaceably to every one; and if you find some faults among the Missioners, cover those faults with the Zeal of a holy Charity, to the end the new Christians may not be Scandaliz'd. Propose for your Example what St. Francis de Sales, your own Country-man wou'd have done in the like Conjuncture.

The diversity of Opinions which you will find amongst a Heathen People, ought not to alarm you: You know that the like Disagreement is often found in Christian Nations. You are to take your informations from the Learned of the Kingdom, from the Publick Doctors, and principally from the Emperor himself, who is the Head of the Learned, and speaks in the Name of the whole Empire. It belongs to him to declare the true Sense of the Chinese Books; and after that, 'the our part to declare whether the Explanation he gives, is consonant to our holy Faith.

Tou are to inform your self, whether the Answer of the Prince to the Queries of the Jesuits, which has appear'd in his Name, and been dispers'd thro' all Europe, be truly his or no. If you find this Answer to be really the Emperor's, and that it is conformable to the Opinions of the Learned, and the Explanation they give of their Books, and that it agrees with the Persuasion of the greatest Part of the Missioners, we shall then on our part have acquitted our selves with all the Diligence that a discreet Zeal prescribes. The wise Constitution of our Predecessor Alexander the Seventh will by that means be consirmed, and we shall have nothing to reproach our selves with for the loss of this great Empire.

But shou'd it happen, which is no ways probable, that there be a Collusion between the Jesuits, and the greatest part of the Missioners, with intention to deceive us; that the Emperor, and all the Learned shou'd have betray'd the Truth in compliance with those Fathers; that all the Christians shou'd be guilty of Perjury, and all this were morally certain. In sine, shou'd you sind your self oblig'd to dart forthyour Thunder, and provoke a Prince, who otherwise is so affectionate to our Religion, that he protests it, and he gives free leave to Preach the Gespel through the whole Empire: 'Tis easy to conceive what our Grief wou'd be; what the Grief of the whole Church, at the Sight of so many thousands of her Children expos'd to be lost for ever.

Wherefire try all the ways of Sweetness; assemble those in whom there there shou'd remain some Zeal for the Catholick Religion; apply your self to gain them, instruct them, consult with them, whether no means may be found to abolish these Ceremonies by little and little, and without Noise; make use of a fatherly Goodness, omit nothing which Christian Charity can suggest in relation to the Christians and Missioners.

But lastly, shou'd it be found necessary, to proceed to a definitive Sentence for extirpating this Evil; Be the first to appear in the Imperial City at the Head of your Companions, fail not there to give in the Presence of the whole Court, and of the principal Missioners, a noble Example of Christian Fortitude, and without shrinking expect a glorious Martyrdom, which will add more Lustre to your Birth.

than ever it can receive from the Roman Purple.

"Tis unquestionable that the Pope did give to his Legat more mild and more efficacious Orders than these, and that he prescrib'd to him more wise Precautions than I can imagine. He knows himself to be common Father; that the Depositum of Faith is intrusted to his Charge; and he, like the Saviour of the World, desires that all Men might be savid.

REFLEXION V.

I Shall not go about to entertain you with the Particulars, how the Legat behav'd himself in so difficult an Enterprise, and capable of striking Terrour into the greatest Saint. To be inform'd of them, you need only read the faithful Journal sent from China; A Treatise written with regret, but however sull of silial Respect towards the Holy See, and for the Person of the Patriarch, now Cardinal.

0

¢

r

e

t

Tis certainly an incredible thing, and hitherto unheard of, that an Infidel Emperor shou'd use all his Endeavours to maintain the Christian Religion in his Empire, by declaring what are the Intentions of his People in the Practice of their Ceremonies; by shewing himself ready to clear the Difficulties which might remain in that Concern, referring at the same time to his Holiness the Pope the Dicision of what is allowable, and what not; by ordering to be laid before him in writing those Points of the Chinese Doctrine which are not agreeable to our Religion, and protessing that it is not his fault, if the Christian Religion be banish'd from China.

But

But it is yet more incredible, that an Apostolical Legat searing that such an important Truth shou'd come to Light, shou'd forbid under the severest Penalties, that any one shou'd consult the Emperor upon the Controverted Points; that he shou'd declare, that they were wholly to stand by the Chinese Books, without ever addressing himself either to the Emperor or to the Learned of the Empire, to be instructed in the Sense of those Books, but that it belong'd to the Europeans, notwithstanding their Ignorance in the Matter, to explain them.

One thing of Importance deserves the Reader's Observation. The present Emperor of China not being a Native, distrusts the Fidelity of his Subjects; and by consequence twou'd be hard to believe, that he, contrary to all Policy, shou'd go about to lower the Honours that are given to Confucius and his Ancestors, by making them pass for Ceremonies purely human and civil, if this was not the universal Sentiment of the Learned of the Emprire.

But altho' (this also is worthy of attention) the Emperor himself, and the Learned, shou'd have made these Declarations upon the dubious Sense of their Books, thereby to render themselves conformable to the Dogma's of our holy Religion, by retrenching what might seem contrary to our Faith. I ask what they cou'd infer from thence? It wou'd be a manifest Sign, that the Chinese, after having read the innumerable Books upon Religion, which the Jesuis for more than an Age have spread thro' that vast Empire, are at length come to the Knowledge of the true God, that they have reform'd their Intentions, and by the Light of the Christian Religion have clear'd the obscure Texts of their Books.

Now what Indecency more odious both to God and Man can there be, than to see the Europeans ill vers'd in the Sciences of China, to give the Lye to the Emperor, and to all the Learned of the Empire, who affure us, that in these Ways of Speech, May it please the Heavens, Heavens grant Heavens keep me, they understand by the Word Heavens, what we Christians mean; that is, the Lord, the Master, the King of Heaven. Why then thus to be tray the Holy Church, in the bosom

bo

th

D

Pe

the

ho

he

Gr

uni Em

dri

hig Pri

In i

a co

wh

who

Por

fion

diff

fing

ruin

B

fion ceffi

rem

fair

tere

You

bosom of which this Empire seems to deposit all her Books that it may speak as she does, and conform its Speech to her Doctrine?

REFLEXION VI.

d

e

r

,

n

-

e

,

S

?

0 y

r

d

e

e

h

n

n

-

f

15

e

f

8

n

THE Legat is not ignorant of the Pains the Jesuits took to obtain for him of the Emperor leave to come to Pekin; now many Addresses they made, how many refusals they bore from that Prince, who now reproaches them with their want of Conduct in that Affair. Nor is he ignorant how advantageously those Fathers spoke of him; insomuch he was commonly call'd amongst the Christians of China, the Great Man come from the West. He knows very well the unheard-of Honours that were done him, so far, as that the Emperor made him eat at his Table, and presented him to drink with his own Hands. These were the Effects of the high Esteem, which the Jesuits had inspir'd into that great Prince for the Sovereign Pontiff, and the Court of Rome. In fine, before these unfortunate Disputes appear'd at Pekin, a certain Jesuit that arriv'd from China related to me these Words from the Mouth of the Emperor himself, Words which I still bear in Memory; You shall see, that in time my whole Empire will embrace your Law. This time was already come, and this Glory did seem to be reserv'd for the present Pontificate. The Joy we shou'd have had from the Converfion of that vast Empire, would without doubt have been very different from what certain People make now appear in disperfing the Mandate of the Legat, a Mandate which entirely ruins that afflicted Christianity.

REFLEXION VII.

But what is the meaning of all the Noise, all the Buffle which the Hereticks make in their Journals, upon occasion of these Chinese Ceremonies? Whence comes their excessive Eagerness, so edifying in appearance, to see these Ceremonies condemn'd? What Interest can they have in an Affair which concerns the Catholick Religion alone? The Interest they find in it is great, and perhaps nothing more savourable did ever happen to them. With-

ch

10

Po

in bi

in an

of

Εı

usi

int

S

Lv

ma

CO

the

T

the

W

to dre

wi

cer

tio

Ca

wh

Pa

to zici:

M

ha

ant

ful

pro

000

Without entring into the Examination in this Place, whether the Pope can pronounce upon a Fact of this Nature, let us suppose that he actually has defin'd contrary to the Persuation of the Chinese, that the Intention wherewith they Practice their Ceremonies is Superstitious and Idolatrous; all the World must need see, that such a Declaration, whatever Qualification you give it, wou'd still be a formal giving the Lye to the Emperor, in the Face of the whole Empire.

This Prince has declar'd that by those Words written in his own Hand, Adore Heaven, he understood, as all the Chinese understand, The Lord of Heaven. No, Sir, say they, you understood the material Heaven. 'Tis to this material Heaven you sacrifice yearly. Your Language does not express the Sense of your Heart: We have certain Assurance from the Europeans, whom you have declar'd Ignorant in the Doctrine of the Empire, altho' they possess it much better than your self; and these are the Men we are to give Ear to, in the present Debates. This wou'd be the Substance of such a Declaration, whatever Art might be made use of in the Manner of expressing it.

Any Man of Sense wou'd easily conceive, to what degree of Resentment such a Declaration must naturally inflame the Emperor. It wou'd infallibly draw after it the Banishment of all the Missioners, and an irreconcilable Hatred of that Prince against our Holy Faith. The Gates of China wou'd for ever be shut to all Catholicks, and by consequence the Hereticks wou'd be the sole Masters of the Traffick of that

Tis well known what has happen'd in Japan. The Hereticks taking Advantage of the Milunderstandings of the Missioners, found means to drive the Portugeze out of those Islands, and after that to work the Ruin of Christianity. What now appears to be a Dispute of Religion, will in time become a Crime against the State. At this very present, they publish in their Gazettes, that the Idolatry of the Chinese Ceremonies is manifest, and they have the Boldness to treat the Pope himself as an Idolater, if he does not condemn them. When they shall have got the upper hand in China, they will change le-

let

12-

IC-

he 12-ye

ın

bi-

у,

ial X-

CC

he or

0, ch

he ee

he nt

at

'd

ne at

e-

16

6

y.

10

y

C-

e

1.

11

change their Note, they will not fail to say, that the Emperor's Indignation is most Just; that it did not belong to the Pope, to send his Orders into China, like a Sovereign Prince into his own Dominions; that he ought not to have intruded himself into Affairs, that are purely politick and civil, by sending an Ambassador to give Laws to the Chinese like a Master, and Condemn their Ceremonies upon the bare Testimony of some Ignerant Europeans, and declar'd such by the Emperor himself. They will also add according to their usual malice, that the principal Aim of this Embassy was, to introduce the French into those Kingdoms.

REFLEXION VIII.

Ome Persons may perhaps imagin, that it wou'd be an easy Matter to abolish those Ancient Customs of China. I very much doubt whether those Persons, as fertile as they may be in Expedients, wou'd find it so easy a Matter, if to compass such a Design, they were to renounce their Goods, their Employs, and their Dignities, as the Chinese must do. They who find so much facility in making the Chinese alter their Customs, wou'd they be so willing to change their own? Wou'd they have no repugnance, for example, to submit to the Orders of a Prince, who shou'd oblige them to go dress'd after a whimsical, fantastical Manner? Wou'd they willingly obey the Decree of a Pope, who shou'd abolish certain Scandalous Merriments, which in their first Institution were certainly Idolatrous? Such are the Bacchanalia, or Carnivals, which are still practis'd in some Countries, and which are no other, than the Remains of the Feast of Bacchas: Pastimes at which a Chinese, tho' an Idolater, wou'd blush to be present.

But, say some others, the Chinese Ceremonies, after the Manner they are set forth in the Books of their Accusers, have a certain Air that Shocks and Scandalizes. To this I answer, That there is nothing in this World, to which a Spite-ful Wit may not give a Malicious Turn. For a convincing proof of this, let us make two or three Suppositions, which will render palpable the Truth of what I advance.

The

The Bonza's have introduc'd into China two infamous Deities: They are two Devils, who are Ador'd under the Names of Amida and Xaca. Let us suppose, that several Chinese Idolaters bear the Names of these Gods. After that, let us put the Case, that the Jesuits in conferring Baptism upon the Neophites, impose these Sacrilegious Names, or permit those who have them, to retain them. This Accusation is brought to Rome, and the Fact is there expos'd with an Apostolick Zeal and Eloquence. These Sacrileges, say they, are committed in the most Sacred Ceremony of our Religion, in which from a Child of the Devil, it is made the Child of God. At the time that the Adorable Names of Jesus Christ, and the Three Persons of the Blessed Trinity are pronounc'd; who wou'd imagin that the Jesuits shou'd found forth the abominable Names of those false Divinities?

Give me leave to ask, whether such an Exposition does not strike a horrour: And yet, its no more than what is permitted in Italy, and Rome it felf, where they give to Christians the Names of Diana, and Hercules, &c. We read in St. Paul's Epiffles, that some Christians of the Primitive Church were call'd Apollo, and Phabe. The Roman Martyrology makes mention of the Birth of St. Bacchus, St. Mercury, St. Nympha, St. Lucina, Names which had been retain'd after Baptism by the fervent Christians of the Infant Church. These were things which the Catholick Church for just Reasons has tolerated; but this condescension wou'd no ways relish with fome fort of People. They frame to us a God of Cruelty, which in truth is not the God of the Christians; and they wou'd Model the Church after the same Manner.

Let us suppose in the second Place, that in times past, there was a famous Courtizan, who is now ador'd as a Goddess; that all their Poetry is fill'd with the infamous Name of this Profitute; that they have given this Name to a Star, and to one of the Days of the Week. Upon this the Jesuits are accus'd at Rome, they permit, say they, that the very Day on which our Saviour dy'd upon the Cross for the Salvation of Mankind, upon which he destroy'd Idolatry by his Sacred Passion, they permit this very Day to be dishonour'd by the infamous

in

be the

nie

DO

of

by

va

no

it i

nei

gra

tall

upo

the

ny

Pai

fter

mix

pos

feer

nou

Pic take his

the

Nev

that look with man

vate

dad

1 bell infamous Name of this abominable Goddess. This wou'd be just like one of the darling Declamations, with which they have stuff'd their Libels publish'd against the Ceremonies of China.

And yet, all things well confider'd, this is no more than our Friday, in Latin Dies Veneris, thus call'd from the Name Tis true, this day ought to have loft its Name by a Decree of St. Sylvefter; but a contrary use has prevail'd; that Name, as infamous as it is in the Original, does now no more Shock the Ears of Christians; on the contrary, it now fills them with a holy compunction. In like Manner, altho' the Chinese Ceremonies seem to have something grating, when they are only confider'd with Relation to certain outward Appearances, yet they cannot but be look'd upon as Innocent, when they are consider'd with regard to the Intention with which the Chinese practice them.

Let the third Supposition be, that the following Calumny is brought to Rome. The Jesuits have caus'd to be Painted at the Entrance of their Church in Pekin, a Mystery of our holy Religion, and, Oh Abomination! Have mix'd therewith a Fable of Paganism. They have there expos'd a Picture of the General Judgment, wherein is to be feen our Saviour environ'd with all his Saints, ready to pronounce the last Sentence against the Impious. In this very Picture under the Eyes of Jesus Christ, who will that Day take Vengeance upon Paganifm, is to be feen Charon with his Boat, passing the Souls of the Damned from one side of the Styx to the other.

What wou'd they say to such an Accusation, were it embellish'd with all the Figures and Ornaments it is capable of? Nevertheless, This Picture I here mention, is no other than that of the famous Michael Angelo, which all Strangers look upon and admire in the Pope's Chappel of the Vatican, without being Scandaliz'd; and indeed, shall that which is manifestly no more than the Effect of the lively and elevated Fancy of the Painter, become a just Subject of Scandal and Horror?

1.

e

0

-

es |

-

1-

n

th

IJ

x. er

le

23 th

y, ey

re s;

115

nd

re

on of ed he

ous

REFLEXION IX.

But what if a Chinese shou'd come into our Catholick Countries, might not he be able to Censure and Reproach us with our Ceremonies from some likeness they may seem to bear with those of China? Let us examin this in another Supposition.

Let us suppose then that a Mandarin, well instructed in the Disputes of the time, and who has learnt a little Italian in his Voyage, comes to Rome, and that he is present at high Mass. He sees the Priest, who with the Thurible in his Hand persumes the Altar from one end to the other; and he asks of the Standers-by, the meaning of that Ceremony. They answer him, that this Incense is burnt in Honour of the Blessed Sacrament, and that it is a sacred Tribute paid to the Divine Eucharist.

In the Asternoon this Mandarin returns back to the same Church, and being curious to observe the Ceremonies that are practised in Rome at the Burial of the Dead, he assists at the Obsequies of a deceased Person. After the Singing of Psalms is over, he observes the Priest clad in his Sacerdotal Vestments, with the same Thurible he made use of in the Morning, to offer Incense to Almighty God, going round the Bier, and incenting the dead Corps.

What's this I behold, says the Chinese? Those who are round about him, and who penetrate no deeper than he into this mysterious Action, answer him coldly, That he sees the Priest offer Incense. Is there some Divinity lies hid in this Carcass, replies he? A filly ignorant old Woman of the Company puts in her Opinion, and tells him, that this sweet Smoak descends even into Purgatory it self, and refreshes very much the poor Soul of the deceased. A prophane Poet standing by, adds, That 'tis a Ceremony deriv'd from the Pagans, who in like manner offer'd Incense at the Burials of their Dead, and backs it with a Verse of Virgil in the Description of the Funeral of Misense:

Congesta cremantur thurea dona.

Y

Sa

fa

Q

M

Chi

til

the

ter

co

OH

fro

this

Вщ

are

Cla

thre

tion Pict

 W_{il}

filled

s no

ries

k

y

n

n

173 at

in

d

y.

of id

ne

at

at

of

al

he

bi

re

to ne

113

he,

et

C3

et

4-

of

e-

Upon that, a Man of Learning draws near to the Mandarin, and whispers him in the Ear : Sir, don't heed what fuch folks as these tell you. This Action which you see, is purely an Ecclefiaftical Honour, which is done to the deceas'd, in token that he departed one of the number of the Faithful, and in the bosom of the Catholick Church: But these grains of Incense, adds the Chinese, are they not burnt in his honour, as I my felf faw this Morning burning in honour of God? Can you thew in all your Canonical Books one fingle Example, which proves, that in the Old Law they ever presented Incense to any other than the true God? You give then to this dead Person the same Worship, the same Honour as to the Almighty. I beg your Pardon, Sira lays the Learned Man, the Intention is the Soul of these fort of Actions, which of themselves are indifferent. Different Motives render the same Ceremony sometimes a Divine Worthip, fometimes an Honour meerly Ecclefiastical, and sometimes purely Cival This is the very Case, continues the Mandarin, and you do the felt-fame thing which you reprehend in our Practife in reference to Confucine, and those Pictures in which are written the Names of our deceas'd Ancestors. Our Idiots, like yours, comprehend not the Mystery of these Ceremonies, and without Reflexion propose to themselves some End quite different from that of others. An Idolater with no more Wit than this good old Woman, may have fome idle Whim in his Head: But those who with us are Men of Learning, as you are here, are perfectly fatisfy'd, that no more than a civil Honour is defign'd. This is their Intention; this is the Senle of our Classic Writers, who prescribe these fort of Ceremonies. Such likewise is the Declaration that has been made by the Emperor throughout all China; nor did it ever enter into our Imaginations, so much as to Dream that the Souls shou'd stick to those Pictures like Flies, or flide into the Names that appear there: Wild Notions! Wherewith some illiterate Europeans have filld all those parts. The Faith of the Christians of China s s no less pure than the Faith of the Christians of these Countries; Heaven be prais'd for it, fays the learned Catholick.

How now, fays the Chinefe, do you also adore Heavene No. answers the Roman, but by this Word we understand the Lord of Heaven. 'Tis also the Master of Heaven, says the Mandarin, whom we denote by this Expression.

REFLEXION X.

Thaps my Stile may appear too light for the Subject, but Hog of the Reader not to oblige me to alter it. He will fee, that the Matter shall not be the less serious, but that it is necessary to treat it after this Manner, to give a right Idea of the Nature of the Chinele Ceremonies, by comparing them with certain innocent things amongst us, which are practised time Hongur at to the Almybly.

without the least Scruple

Let us then not depart from our Mandarin, who after the Service takes a turn about the Church, and examines the Chappels belonging to it. He makes a Stop at one; the Altar of which is adorn'd with two Die Termine plac'd on each fide in lieu of Colours, as is also to be seen in several Parts of Italy. What Species of Men do I discover, says he? They have only a Head, Neck and Shoulders: I fee neither Belly, Legs, nor Feet. Answer is made, that they are Ornaments of Architecture call'd Termini. They are, fays a Man of Letters, Mercurius Vertumni & Dis Termini , the Greeks, and the Romans ador'd them, but at present, serve only to beautify the Places where they are made use of and to and mo

What! Reply'd the Mandarin, do you employ the Figures of Devils to adorn the Altar of the true God? Under favour, Sir, don't you fee little Wings peeping out of the Shoulders? That ought to fatisfy you, that they are Angels, altho' as to the rest those Statues resemble Pagan Divinities. That is to fay, replies the Chinese, you have grafted two Angels upon two Devils. With Permission, Sir, don't offer to say fo, all the World wou'd laugh at it. You are only Scandaliz'd, because you look upon these Works with a Chinese Eye. Were you to remain some time in Europe, and look upon them with the same Eye that we do, you wou'd soon discover, that these fort of things have no relation at all to Religion, and you wou'd be the first to laugh at the Scandal you now take.

Coming

1

d

6

C

b

1 fi

u

to

t

N

g

0

0

N

th

tr

0

e

13

t

1

IT

a

n

V

e

M.

h

f

1,

Is

d

d

4

01

25

r,

3

0

0

n

-

re

h

(e u

g

Coming out of the Church, the Mandarin proceeds in his Walk bout the City of Rome, accompany'd with a Crowd of the Curious, who are pleas'd to fee his Amazements. What Church is that, fays he? 'tis answer'd, the Temple of the Minerva, it belongs to the Dominicans. This Minerva is fome Saint, I suppose, of the Holy Order of St. Dominick. Oh fie! Sird Far from being a Saint : this Minerva is a Goddels of the Gentiles, which was hammer'd out of the Head of another Deity. And are these good Fathers Christians? Oh! Not the less for that Why then do they adore this Goddess? God forbid, they pay no Worlbip to her. But tell me then in the Church of St. Peter, don't you Honour St. Peter? don't you Honour St. Andrew in the Church that bears his Name? This Temple is not at all Dedicated to Minerva, it only retains the Name, because it is built in the Place where anciently there stood one consecrated to that Goddess. do they permit the People, replies the Mandarin, to call it by fo Impious and Profane a Name? What wou'd you fay of the Jesuits of China, shou'd they suffer the converted Chinese to call a Temple Dedicated under the Invocation of Mary the bleffed Mother of Jesus, the Church of Xaca, or Amida? There is no Ground of Scandal, Sir; a long Use join'd with some Grains of Atlowance, has stript this Manner of Speech from all Impiety: But 'tis what you will never understand, unless you continue among us long enough to be accustom'd to the Language, and Ideas of the Europeans. They go on in their Discourse.

What is that Spire!* Erected against the Church, and the Meaning on't? What are those Cyphers, those strange Figures wrought upon it? They are, tay they, the Remnants of the Idolatry and Superstition of the Egyptians; and some of those Figures represent the Gods, that is to say, the Devils which that People ador'd. And are not the Dominican Fathers uneasy at such Abominations before the Church of the true God? If you consider'd, say they, these Objects with our Eyes, you wou'd take them for what they are barely for ^{*} The Obelisk Erested before the Convent of Minerva.

Ornaments of the Place, according to the Intention of him that caus'd this Obelisk to be Erected, not as a facred Memorial of Idolatry, but as a Monument recommended only by its Antiquity.

What means that Cross upon the top of the Spire? Were those Devils reconcil'd to the Church? did they become Chriflians? Forbear such Expressions, they are no less than Blasphemy. The Reason of my speaking thus, is, because upon Occasion of a like Cross on the top of a Pillar in a Church-Yard, I was told that the Cross was a sign that all those who were buried in that Place were Christians. Sir, it has been often faid, that you must have Regard to the different Intentions, and we alone are capable of informing you what they The Cross plac'd on the Pillar in the Church-Yard fignifies what you say, but on the top of this Spire, it Teaches us that it has Triumph'd over the Devils that are under it. The answer is good; but suppose our Chinese as incredulous in the case of your Intentions, as you are of theirs, shou'd continue to be Scandaliz'd at the Sight of these diabolical Figures in the Middle of a publick Place, wou'd you throw down this Monument, which Represents to the Eyes the shameful Relicks of a detestable Idolatry? Well! I leave it to you Gentlemen of China, my Country-Men, to judge, whether Rome wou'd have fo much complaifance, as to fuffer fuch a loss as even this, which might draw after it the Ruin of fo many other Pytamids much more Majestick, and which are the Wonders of this Queen of Cities.

But why at least don't they forbid the Carnaval throughout all Christendom; I heard the Preacher this Morning athrm it to be a Rag of Idolatry. They don't forbid it, Sir, because such a prohibition, althor holy, wou'd cause a Commotion among People. S. Charles Barromeus, whose Name you must have heard from the Jesuits in China, was resolv'd one time to abolish the Carnaval in a City of Italy, and the Mutiny was so great, that to render ineffectual the Order of that Prelate, Deputies were sent to Rome. If the Inhabitants of that City had submitted to it, says the Chinese, would they not have loft their Dignities, their Goods, and perhaps their Lives ?

h

P

E

ŀ

7 0

P

ti

fa

to

If

as

as to

fr

FII

OL

ty

K

T

cri

a

th ou

of.

DO

Lives? No, Sir, they ran no hazard of such Losses as those But it is sufficient for you to know, that the Church is a Tender and Compassionate Mother, who shuts her Eyes to a great many things, when they are not bad; and to avoid greater Evils, dissembles small Impersections. She Roots out Abuses, but it by degrees; And the Spirit which Animates her, permits her not for trisles, to excite amongst her Children a long Series of troubles and vexatious Disputes.

C

n

0 n

y

3 t.

3

3

13 s

C

5,

5

n

)-

u

e

1-ıt

f

y

I see then, replies the Chinese in a serious tone, the Old Christians, and who for a long time have been such, have extraordinary privileges. These traces of Idolatry which you conserve in your Names, at this time, in your Feasts, Statues, Pictures and Churches, are become trifles with you. You infect, without restraint, with the Ordures of Paganism, even Heaven it self, of which you leave not one Inch undefil'd, The Stars which with fo much Lustre denounce the Glory of God, cannot with you finish their cariere, but under the opprobrious Names in false Divinities. All this causes of you neither horror nor confusion: There is nothing that you cannot fave by means of your Intention; and the Church forbears to Condemn you, for fear of Contrillating her dear Children. If so, is it likely but this good Mother will upon us Chinese as her Children, whom the has newly brought forth, and arc. as I may fay, yet hanging at her Breafts? Ah! we live at too great a distance; too wide an extent of Sea separates us from Europe.

When the Case is about you, they are afraid of Murmurings, and even light Disturbances. When the concern is ours, whom you do not value, you resolve without disticulty to force us to Renounce all the honourable Employs of the Kingdom, to which only the learned are admitted, and which Title is only allowed to those who Offer to Confucius, not Sacrifices, as you say, but Presents, which imply no more than a meer civil Worthip, you little care that we be reduc'd, and that upon weak Conjectures, to the hard necessity of passing our Lives among the Dregs of the People, if yet the Anger of a despis'd Monarch cut not the Thread assunder, or to renounce the Obedience which we owe to the Pope, and to the Law of Fefas Christ. We have made our Tears to flow, as I may say, as far as Rome; we have fent thither Authorick Attestations, which certify d the Innocence of our Ceremonies. What has been done to Comfort these poor desolate Christians? I Repeat it again; this good Mother looks not upon us as her Children; and our great Distance hinders the Effects of her tenderness.

the

Our Remonstrances have fignify'd nothing in China, they have been torn before the Faces of the Suppliants that prefented them. Our Emperor has published his Declarations in vain; nay, we have been forbid to confult him concerning our Ceremonies, altho' he is the lawful Interpreter of them. All Endeavours have been us'd, to make us appear Idolaters, whether we would or no. But when our Masters shall be driven away, and that we shall be Orphans without Fathers, withour Sacraments, without any one to affilt us at our deaths, the God of Christians; your God and ours will he too shut his Ears to our Complaints, and his Eyes to our Mifery and Tears? He who has in his Power the most terrible Scourges, who makes the Earth to tremble, and lays it walte when he pleafee by War, and Mortality, will he not to be Reveng'd of those, who shall have pluckt up his Vineyard at the time, when just upon the Point of rendring Fruit in abundance?

REFLEXION XI.

Is not before some secret Tribunal, whose Mysteries are not to be penetrated, that the Affair of the Ceremonies of China is transacted: Tis in the Face of the World, and before all the Learned. Who have before them the Matter of Fact, and in their Hands the Books, the Informations, the Depositions.

All the World knows, that the Emperor of China consulted by the Jesuits, in a Writing drawn up on Purpose, has answer'd in his own Hand, and declar'd by an Imperial Decree, that the Ceremonies which make the Subject of the present dispute, are meerly civil, and that the Sense and Meaning which the Fathers offix to them, is exact and conformable to Truth. He who shou'd say, that the Emperor upon this Occafion

p

0 fe

at

fo

N

pl

bu

th

hi

th

ha

th

W

L

Bo

C

casion has publish'd a Lye in the Face of his whole Empire. would in all likelihood judg of the Conduct of this great Prince by his own. Soratha Sentence will never come from the Mouth of any Man of Honour whatfoever: And I shall never perfuade my felf, that the Pope will offer to provoking an Affront to a Prince, who, tho' a Pagan, loves and favours the Chri-Stian Religion want Sind 1 14 his Volome.

'Tis also well known that the Learned of China (of whose Intentions 'tis not permitted to doubt, after the Declaration they have made) and that all the Millioners, amongst whom are several Dominicans, affure the same thing with the Em-

.

e

it

ie

y

.

Ħ

1:

)e

5,

18,

HS

id

9

2-

le,

ıft

ies

re-

10, at-

ns,

red

an-

ee,

ent

ing

to!

Dcion

Robert Moli. D. D. In fine, no Body can be ignorant, (and a Bishop of China of the Order of St. Augustin, observes it in the Appeal he sends to Rome;) no Body can be ignorant, I say, Chinese Language is fo difficult, and obscure, that whatever Pains an European takes in the learning it, he shall never Arrive to fo much Knowledge of it, as the least of the Doctors of the This makes it plain, that we are not to ask the Explanation of the Chinese Books from an illuerate European, but from the Learned of the Country, and principally from their Head, that is, the Emperor who has already explain'd himself in the Name of the whole Empire.

The Pope, the Cardinals, the Consulters, in a Word, those who at Rame bear a Part in Judging this grand Affair, have never study'd the Chinese Language. Their decision then must needs rely upon the Report of Witnesses, and those Witnesses ought, without coubt, to be the ablett Men in the Language, and to have the most perfect Knowledge of the Books, and the Intention wherewith the Chinese practice their Ceremonies I a monthing all the Act 18 to H cheenter A . W.

t Mr. Pagger, The fruity of Prin-

4 Roll and A. Handb. M. A. 1 Mr. Binness & Cuneral Sermon striken F P N. W. S. Chelle.

harbitan sun

. W. Edwarf a Thankserving.

1 S. Clast. M. A. 1 Mr. Brudewy, The Son of Tabeal-Blackburg, Dean of Extern. I The Ept as the Protestant Rel.

0.0.

Axch. Ho neck,

I to a dimer, D. D. J P Downer. M. A.

1 Villandus Praviples, Co. E Rub. Jonks M. A.

cation has published a Lye in the Face of his whole Empire. A Catalogue of Sermoni Printed and Sold by H. Hills dured adt min Black-fryars, near the Water-fide. ding aid yd 14 Ohn Tillerfon, late Archbisnop of Conterbury. 4 Sir William Dater, Bilhop of Cheffer, 14 his Volume. 1) Offipring Blackal Bilbon of Excener 18 Elg. Beyl's Lectures. John Sprint, the Bridewomay. William Wake, B. of Lincoln. 3 John Sharp Archiff. Tork od A Robert Mofs, D. D. Salbo Knaggs M. A Das 4 White Kenner, D.D. Hen. Sacheverel M. A. I Rob. Lightfoot, B. D. 3 William Beveridge, D. D. Wold of George Stanhope, Denn of Canta 2 | Rich Willis Dean of Lineding Phill Stubs, M. A. Mr. Robert Parjons, Earl of Rochefter's Funeral Sermon. W Ralph Lambers D. D. William Squage, B. D. I Symon Partrick M. A. . Mr. Robert Gery, Dean of Carlife with a Letter, and large Vindication with a 2d Letter in Answer, 3 George Smaldridg D. D. 110 John Haffered D. Dis ad of Dr. Moore, Bith. of Ely. 2 Will Nicholfen, Bp. of Carlifte. W. Fleetwood, B. of St. Alaph. Anth, Horneck, D. D. John Adams, D. D. 1 P. Downer, M.A. 4 Beng. and 7. Hoadly, M. A. 2 Tho. Tennifon, A.B. of Canterbury. 1 S. Clark, M. A.

1 Blackburn, Dean of Exeter.

I Rich. Tenks, M. A.

henw mon Fran Castrell, D.D. John Kackburn, D. D. Mr. Cornwallis. John Stilsman, B. D. A Hall 41 F. Manningham, WDo D. 1 call dibe Laft Century. 1 Robert Eyre, D. D. Th. Trimnal, D.D. now, B. of Norm 9. Dunfter A. M. 7. Sharp, A. M. T. Sherlock, M. A. I R. Nelson, 7. Bife, M. A. & D. D. 7. Trop, M. Al Language is loni.M. gala and TIM. Wotten, B.D. MESOOWIE IN a W. Tilyentelwork doum of 1: Willett, M. A. T. Stephens. The Royal Merchant. Dibe Wedding Ring all mon 100 1) Character of a Hiroupus Woman Christianity in sort 2 Sprat, B. Rochester. Lawfon, D. D. 1 The keeping Christmas and other Holy days. Good News for Repenting Sinners A Letter from the Paffors and Professors of Genera to the King of Pruffia, with the King's Answer. Mr. Stenet a Thanksgiving. Mr. Spademan a Thanksgiving.

1 Mr. Piggot, The frailty of Princes confider'd. Mr. Evans a Thanksgiving.

1 Mr. Williams a Funeral Sermon on Mt. Doolittle.

Mr. Bradbury, The Son of Tabeal; The Epit of the Protestant Rel.

Villanous Principles, &: